Tripti Sinha is the Director of Networking and Telecommunications in the Office of Information Technology. Her main professional goal is to provide leadership and vision in driving tomorrow's communications technologies.

To reach this goal, Tripti is charged with positioning the transport infrastructure to drive IT strategic initiatives; actively participating in and driving IT strategic planning; partnering with researchers/faculty and technological entities to help identify emerging and future technologies; collaborating with vendors to develop and deploy future technologies by serving as a test-bed/beta-site for them; and bringing national and international recognition and visibility to the University of Maryland's communications technology solutions.

Tripti also manages campus-wide communications infrastructure and services, partners closely with OIT security to protect university communications, and handles her department's budget.
